House of Commons THE MERCHANT OF VENICE.

The Bandmann Comedy Company on JUST Monday evening supped with the Imhandicap is always placed upon any artist who essays one of the great parts from Shakespeare's marvellous gailery. Every theatregoer who has thought about them at all has evolved his own transcription of the characters, has fitted them to the atmos--- phere of his own imaginings and has -own desires. So no matter how great the player it is seldom that he or she realises for the individual patron has evolved for himself in his private study of the plays. Henry Irving always felt that handicap, so does Hermann Vezin, to our mind one of the finest exponents of Shakespearean character the modern stage has seen; and so we suppose do every actor and actress who essay to interpret with conscientious verity the plays of the great Elizabethan. Taking all this into consideration we have little hesitation in evening was very satisfactory. The whole company acted, with few exceptions, with a fine restraint, giving life and actuality to the noble lines: not mouthing, not gabbling, nor yet ever falling into the one refunde style beloved by Fechter, Siddons and the Victorian school and perpetuated even down to the closing years of the nineteenth century in several of the old stock companies. No, the whole performance was quiet, dignified and infused with thoughtfulness throughout. Mr Charles Vane, as Shylock, presented a capital study of the immortal Jew. Never once did he over emphasise his bitter hated of Antonio and his fellow-Christians; never once did he allow his rage to tear itself to tatters; while his hopeless despair and utter breakdown in the Court scene, was one of the most natural manifestations of baffled and defeated humanity we have ever seen upon the stage.

His exit was perfect. Next to him in bearing off the honours of the evening comes Miss Blanche Forsyth. who made a most attractive Portia. From the moment when she began to show her hopes and fears as Bassanio advances to make his choice of the caskets, till that glorious, merry moment when she turns the tables upon him by returning him his ring, she ii led the stage whenever she appeared upon it. As lover, as Chatchine, as advocate, as mischievous humourist, she was almost the Portia of our dreams. An excellent foil was Miss Helen Russell as Nerisea; with her stately pro-sence and dignified delivery no wonder she resented Gratiano's dubbing the masquerading lawyer's clerk as "a little scrubbed boy." Jessica, Miss Joan Harcourt, was sweetly played, though we can never quite forgive her plundering her father to feather a lover's nest. To TO-MORROW (WEDNESDAY), Nov. 17, Mr Henry Dallas fell what has always appeared to our mind the unentiefactory part of Antonio. We suppose Shakespeare intended him to be the fine flower of the way of thinking he has not made a success of the character. Of course much must be forgiven Antonio; his great love for Bassanio tempted him to enter into the bond, but then did he not at the moment confidently expect to come out the better of the Jew in the transaction, to get the use of Shylock's money for nothing ? Then when he escapes the great hazard of his life through l'ortia's specious pleading and most transparent legal quibbling, he scarcely displays the magnanimity towards Shylock which the circumstances demand, he "rubs it in" too much for our liking. But this notwithstanding, Mr. Dallas made a very notable Merchant. The light hearted, debonnair Bassapio, the young fushionable, the bon wivant, the gay spendthrist, purified in the end we hope by the love of noble woman, was excellently pourtrayed by Mr Douglas Vigora; while as Gratiano, the saucy tongued, Mr E. Spencer Geach was capital. We could have wished him less exuberant in the trial sectio. His sarcasms would have been far more effective is asides, instead of being shouted aloud to the world at large; he should have gone in for rapier play, not bludgeon work, for his victim was already quivering, may falling, before the shattering blows delivered to tongued Doctor from Padus. Of the minor characters, Mr Gordon McLeod made an offective and lover-like Lorenzo Mr Herry Esmond a sober-paced Tubal; while the clowning of Mr Harry Neville as Launcelot Gobbo, to the excellent pantalooning of Mr W. Baker as Gobbe senior, was about the best we have seen anywhere. Greatly daring, the Company justified themselves in every way, and their rendering of "The Merchant of Venice" must be numbered among their Hongkong triumphs. Meedless to say the play was well put on, costumes and scenery being correct, and of the best, while the celerity with which the scenes followed one another was by no means the least of the many achievements of a notable syming To-night will be given " An Englishman's

(From Our Own Currespondent.) EDINBURUH, October 14. THE COURT I. THE MORTE.

During the stay of the Court at Balmorals the King presented colours to a detachment from the Queen Victoria School for Sons of Sailors and Soldiers, Dunblane. The ceremony was private, and conducted strictly according to military etiquette. The detachment was accompanied by Colonel M. . Wilkinson, Commandant, and the consecration service was read by the Rev. C. Ritchie, Chaplain to the School. The SIMA, OURI, MUTABE, HOJO, commandant thended the King's colour to His blajecty, the senior boy receiving it on bonded knee. The Adjutant (aptain D. Mathers) then handed the School colour to his Majesty, and the second senior boy received it, also on bended knee. The King briefly addressed the boys, Colonel . Wilkinson replied on behalf of the School, and the coremony concluded with the Royal salute. .. Colonel Wilkinson was decorated by the King with the Victorian Order.

.The King also decorated four fishermen of Pharmy Island, Orkney, with the silver medal for gallantry in saving life at sea. On Monday, the King left Balmoral for TIL ADDRESSES (or above : 'IWASAEL London. It is announced that his health Codes:-Al, ABO 5th Ed., Western Union. has been greatly benefitted by his stay in the Highlands. In the Royal forests, the King and his guests accounted for ninetythree stags, and they were very successful on the grouse moors.

LORD ROSEBERT AND THE SEAFORTH HIGHLANDERS.

Lord Rosebery opened the new club started by the Seaforth Highlanders Association in Edinburgh, - a club on advanced lines such as have no equal in any other part of the country. His short speech was one of those delicate rhetorical mossics in the construction of which he is so perfect a master. Heconfessed that helaboured under disabilities for such a duty: "I am not a soldier, I am not a Highharder, I am not a the thought that "the Sesforths do not belong to the Highlands alone, but are the property of Great Britain, aye, and of the Empire." In a historical sketch of the regiment, he recalled that the first voyage which the 72nd made to India lasted ten months, and caused 247 deaths from scurry alone, - but the meagre skeleton spudered a good account of itself." And "what was their mward? They were deprived of the kilt. The exploration of that mysterious denudation, or rather deprivation of super-clothing, -had never been made 277 clear; but I suppose it was one of those wild and wanton changes in uniform in which the War Office in all periods of our history has taken such pleasure." .The history of regiment, he went on to say, "is not the history of colonels and officers alone, but the history of the rank and file; it is the regimental traditions which make it illustrious, which make it formidable in the field, and where weapons and numbers alone will not avail, give it glory and confidence." There was a parade of 360 veterans of the Seaforths, 20 of them survivors of the Crimes and Mutiny, and when he thanked the Association for the privilege of opening the Club, he "thanked them much more for the privilege of walking down the ranks, and seeing that splendid gallery of history, that superb record of military service which was a silver key, presented to him by exthe ARRUAL SUBSCRIPTION $2.00. Any colour-sergeant George Bertam, the senior A SUFFRAGIST DEMONSTRATION. The Suffragists are very much in evidence Hongroug, September 8, 1909. 1132 in Scotland at the present time. On Saturday they had a demonstration in Edinburgh, a pageant procession followed by a mass meeting in the Waverley Market. Great crowds witnessed the "show," as it was called. The prevalent feeling seemed to be one of curiosity. Of enthusiasm there was little or none. It was matter of general remark that if the women onlookers took up an attitude of opposition contained in the medals on their breasts.

Lord Rosebery then opened the Club with the men were good-humouredly passive. The demonstrators were evidently confined to members of the well-to-do middle class; the working women were absent, three or four fisher girls in their picturesque Newhaven dress being a marked exception. At least one half of the processionists carried bannerettes, and there was a forest of larger flags all of course of the party colours, burple, white, and green. Many of the women wore purple hate, with green or purple dresses, and white sashes inscribed with the words "Votes for The chief marshal was Mrs "General" Drummond, who was (Continued on Page 4

THE KILTED BATTALION FOR LEEDS. public meeting has been convened at ls in connection with the movement to a kilted battalion, but the correspona between the promoters and the Riding County Association of Terisls does not encourage the hope of ate success. Colonel Mends, Secreof the Association, writes, - " You are ably-not aware that the Territorial is formed in brigades and divisions former consists of four battalions, er more nor less; and in this Riding battalions, have been formed. there is no room for an one, nor would there be any shood of permission to raise one g granted, even if the County Associaconsidered such a course desirable. goes on, - "It is a matter of regret Scotamen living in Leeds, and erently making a livelihood in the should feel themselves unable serve in the existing corps formed those amongst whom they have r homes." Mr Macleod, one of the noters of the battalion, replies that tamen in Lords have joined the existing os to a greater extent than, native-born kshiremen, and asks if it is not pose to form a Scottish brigade? Colonel ds answers,-"I don't think the idea sising a Scottish Brigade is feasible, or which would be entertained by the ay Council."

PROFESSOR BAINY.

he literary event of the week is "The of Principal Rainy," by the Rev. negie Simpeon. The critics unanimously it as one of the best of recent biohies, and one reason for this favourable ion is that the limitations of the great esiastic are as freely indicated as those minent qualities which gained for him title of "a Prince of the Church. Simpson does not hesitate to give the tions of Rainy's antagonists. He tells on one occasion he met Dr Robert-Smith, the hero of the most famous nodern Scottish heresy hunts, and said ith to him,-"You're a young man-'re going into the Free Church-don't t Rainy-he's a Jesuit." Of course, book is mainly interesting to Scotsmen; it is a fine picture of one who filled an eptionally difficult position; no Preserian leader, certainly no Primate, had ask more difficult than he had to lead Free Church, with the ultra-orthodox the one end and the higher critics at accomminted with his career to read of the poverty stricken appearance of his home in the last year of his labourious life, though Lord WHLIAN Com seems to have been greatly surprised thereat.

The University scheme propounded

by his visitor soon won the approval of the great ex-Viceroy, the author of that famous if quixotic treatise "Exhortation to Study," which has done so much to further the cause of modern experiments in China. After enquiring how the University would be supported and being assured that funds would be freely forthcoming from England and America, Chang Chin-rong introduced a topic of even greater interest from his point of view. What would be the proposed University's position with regard to Confucius's teaching? Lord

ILLIAM CECH'S reply we quote in full:-

I explained that while the university

ened thinkers of the West held his wisdom, so far from being opposed to the teaching of Charge, was, on the whole, quite consistent with Christian faith." We are not surprised to learn attitude towards Confucius on the part of an English divine won the instant regard of His Freellency and that he at once seized the opportunity of clearly set little store by science and that if Lord WILLIAM CECIL's proposed

HONGRONG, TURIDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1909,

CHANG CHIH-TUNG AND A WESTERN UNIVERSITY.

LORD WILLIAM CECIL , during his recent visit to North China in the interests of the Oxford and Cambridge committee who desire to erect a Christian University in the Middle Kingdom, had an interview with the late CHANG CHIEF rund, whose death the more influential portion of Chinese Society is still sincerely deploring. The aged statesman was found living amid most austere surroundings. Indeed, Lord WILLIAM expresses the opinion that the room in which the interview took place could not be considered adequate for original thinker, administrator, or statesthe parlour of one of his working-men parishioners. His Lordship, goes on to say, "the walls were of plaster unadorned, the floor was of brick not too well laid, and I could not help feeling that if OTHER KINDS IN GREAT my friend the medical officer of health at Hatfield saw some of my poorer pari- his countrymen, bred in the patriarchal shioners living in such a room he would traditions, he was as the fine flower have immediately brought the matter their ancient civilization and the de before the district council, and the fender of their ancient faiths. OO house would have been closed as unfi for habitation... The furniture told the tale that one hears all over China of the advance of the West. Edinburgh, for the foundations of the new Chapel of the Knights of the Thistle, which is being built in the south-cast angle of St Giles' Cathedral, have brought to light relics of a past age. The site of this new chapel, just off the High Street, is on historic ground. A large number of b nes, including a skull, have been found about seven feet below the surface. Although now a paved square, this used to be a graveyard, indeed, it was the earliest in Edinburgh; and a few yards from the spot-where the workmen are engaged there is a small bronze plate for in among the granite sets marking the resting-place of John Knox. A large apartmen, with solid stone walls has also been laid bare. It has an arched roof and a large fire-place, the marks of smoke being still visible in the chimney, Apparently the apartment was one of the underground cellars of the old "Luckenbooths," the little shops that were clustered against the walls of the Lieut, Green's inclusion will probably come as a surprise some, but there is no doubt in the absence of H. Hancock he the best "keeper" available. So far he has been out of form this season but doubtless will soon get into stride. Elborough's wicket-keeping on Saturday was not good he was quite at sea with Garnett's bowling, and missed one opportunity of stumping, at Military Tour in Japan, accounting for over 20 wickets, and he has had plenty of experience with both Garnett's and Baird's bowling.

I should like to have seen Hutchison included in the side, instead of either Edwards or Anderson. Hutchison is a very safe field, quito a useful change bowler, and after he has been in for 10 minutes or a quarter of an hour is as dangerous a bat as any one.

The Team selected, on the whole, will meet with the approval of most Cricketers who have carefully followed the games on Over a week ago we published the total the Ground, and is probably one of the > W. C. D. Torner: has played in more Interport Oricket than any other member of the side. Excellent bat, has been off form during the last two years, but seems to have recovered this. Bad field.

> Capt. H. H. C. Baird : the best all round player in the combination. Fine free bat, good bowler, right hand medium pace, and an excellent field. Captained the Military Team touring in the North this summer, and has had plenty of experience of good cricket.

T. E. Pearce : a most consistent be Excellent fielder. Has played in Interport Cricket for the last 5 years, and shares with Bird the distinction of being the only players in the team who met the Straits in Capt. Garnett: will "probably account for most wickets for the team provided the wicket keeps hard and fast. Bowls slows with plenty of spin either way. Fair bat and very safe field.

Lieut. Bagnall'r fast right hand bowler. rather arraction tir best happens to be his day when he bowls well. The best feld. on the side, one of the best cover points seen on the sround for some years. Hits defence.

W. N. Edwards : played against Shanghai in 07 and '08, and on both occasions made runs. Splendid eye, and has one or two good shots, but does not give one the impression that he is likely to make runs. DIANOS return to the wickets.

Lieut. Anderson : good bat, plays with a very straight bate Has not done very much this season so, far, but played saveral very excellent innings last year. Very safe field.

Lieut. Green: wicket keeper, with a very pretty style. Quite as good as any other keeper we have had when in form. Has made plenty of runs, and likely to do better on fast wickets.

The game last Saturday on the Cricket Ground proved of interest to the followers of the various players with ambitions to the Interport Team. The Probables included 9 of the side now chosen to play against Shanghail Anderson was absent. and Capt. Beasley is the one left out. The latter is a very poor field, and this will probably have accounted for his exclusion. as he has played some very patient and careful innings this season, and if the batting had to be strenghtened at the expense of the bowling and fielding he should certainly be included.

I understand the first Match is not likely to take place until next Monday, as the Shanghai team will not arrive until late on Thursday afternoon, the Empress being a day late. The Straits Team will probably arrive late the same afternoon, so that neither of our Visitors are likely to prepared to play on the Friday morning.

Football Notes.

It is true that the Cirb made an occasional run or two, but there was always such a big disparity between the eleven that detailed observations are not merited. The only men who shone at all well for Hongkong were Barlow, Carroll and Danby. Eager, a new man at centre, shaped as if he could do better in superior

> The only circumstance to note in regard to the Buffs is that two new men were seen in the ranks. Cloke at right back proved himself a powerful kick, but he lacks the nimbleness and curtainty of Bartlett. The new man in Drew's place-Houckham-did not shape at all badly. He plays with any amount of dash and if he can be relied on to keep up consistency of form, should fill the vacancy fairly well. -

> Before leaving, the subject of this a word should be penned as to the actions of the Club linesman. He was constantly interfering either with his tongue or by his signals to the referee, which came with irritating frequency. There is a limit to a lineaman's functions, but this gentleman seemed desirous of over-rading the players, the referee and everybody else. It was obvious that he had no deep knowledge of the offside rule, for he went the length of signalling one of the Buffs of offside when a legitimate goal was scored. He was, however, rightly ignored by the referee. A man is not necessarily offinds if when he roceives the hall there are less than three defenders in front of him. Perhaps our friend wasn't aware of this demontary fact.

As to championship prospects, it is yet rather early in the day to speculate. The next few weeks should fairly well settle the matter. The result of the Engineers Artillery match fixed for Saturday may in the Hongkong Manils opium smuggling have something to do with the question. for I understand that the R. HOMORONO THEFT

The hundred thousand dollars which the Chinese have contributed towards the cost of the proposed University at Houghoug are a sufficient proof of their interest in the new project. That the Chinese are liberal with their wealth when once their interest is aroused is known to all who have experience of our Far Eastern settle ments where the Chinese who are British aubjects most do congregate; but the scheme of a University in Hongkong is primarily a British idea. It is the Chinese however, who will chiefly benefit from it and the new enthusiasm in the Celestial Empire for the Western learning will pro bably bring very many pupils thither from every province of the mainland. Exactly what effect the doctrines of Europe may have upon the Chinese mind it is difficult to predict. The political teaching of John Stuart. Mill has not been altogether a benefit to India; it is possible that Herbert Spencer may not be an unmixed blessing, 788 to China. The theories of government prevalent in the hisst are so fundamentally different from those held by advanced political philosophers in this country, however, that they may fail of effect for that very reason. There is the possibility that. they may be considered merely as academic exercises by the Chinese students at Hongkong; for it will not be easy for new doc- Ti trines to be inculcated in a land which S has hardly changed during five thousand 81 years. - Globs.
